YOU MUST ENSURE THE PASSENGER MUST NOT BE OUT ON BOND OR HAVE ANY WARRANTS.

Invisible Angels only provides survivor flights to established safe homes, safe home relocation, transportation to court appearances, and advocacy and awareness transport. Invisible Angels does not interact directly with survivors; all flights must be coordinated through law enforcement, established safe homes, or accredited rescue organizations. We do not provide transportation for survivors to go to: public shelters, family members or private residences. We do not fly survivors out of country internationally or return them to their home countries.

Great Care Must Be Provided in All Phases of Transport

1. Two Days Before Departure

Advocates and safe home staff should walk survivors through the ticketing and boarding process, ensuring they check in online 24 hours before departure. If the survivor has a cellphone, please help them download the airline's app, create an account, and access their ticket information. Airports are busy and unpredictable—you must arrive at the departure airport at least two hours before the flight.

2. At the Airport (Departure & Arrival)

When dropping off a survivor, do not leave them at the entrance. Accompany them all the way to security. If the survivor does not have identification, a TSA/DOT official will meet them and escort them through security and to the gate.

3. When Picking Up a Survivor at the Airport by the Receiving Safe Home

Coordinate in advance with the sending safe home regarding meeting arrangements. Request a (same day) photo of the survivor in the clothing she will be wearing so she can be easily identified. Arrive early, park, and go to the airline's ticket counter to request a gate pass if possible. Meet the survivor at the gate as she exits the aircraft, then escort her through baggage claim and directly to your vehicle. Survivors should never be left to navigate the airport alone. Air travel can be overwhelming and triggering, and both sending and receiving safe homes must provide steady, compassionate support throughout the entire journey.
